

“That’s the story”: an interview with Roy Glauber

Panel discussion at the Higgs Centre for Theoretical Physics
Tuesday, 28th October 2014 5pm
Lecture Theatre A – James Clerk Maxwell Building

José Ignacio Latorre (Barcelona – Physics)
Fabian Hilfrich (Edinburgh - History)
Michela Massimi (Edinburgh - Philosophy)
Mathias Thaler (Edinburgh – Politics)

Abstract:

Nobel laureate Prof. Roy J. Glauber is the last living scientist from the Theory Division of the Manhattan Project at Los Alamos. His clear, fluent and articulate narration brings first hand information on the life at Los Alamos, the main scientific characters there, the Trinity test of the first ever nuclear weapon, the bombing of Japan and the political aftermath of the project. Glauber's account is documented with audiovisual material recently declassified from the Los Alamos Archive.

The producer of this documentary, José Ignacio Latorre from the University of Barcelona, supported by a panel of scholars from the University of Edinburgh, will participate in the debate with the public.